For Students March 29, 2023

Walb Student Union. The summit was sponsored by WellRec, Healthy Boiler Employee Well-being, the Office of Student Affairs, and Wellbeing.

Snacks and Study weather permitting...

"Having Fun Testing Hypotheses," presented by Professor Dave Maloney. Possible stargazing afterward at the observatory, Physics: Friday Night at the Observatory

The second of three workshops on diversity will focus on recognizing the harmful nature of microaggressions and how to intervene as an active bystander.

Diversity 102

Groups may want to consider registering as a team.

Don Dates

Reserved Senior's Artistic Gifts Say Plenty

facing a degree of financial insecurity that would make travel to Fort Wayne a hardship—this year's competition received 56 applications.

Conducted remotely to encourage participation from applicants living far and wide—including those whose families may be unable to travel, the competition, and the class of 2023–24 is made up of six students identified as Chapman Scholars and another as a Doermer Exceptional Scholar.

exceptional research of students within their disciplines, but also utilize their position to inspire participation."

Mary Encabo-Bischoff (left) and Creative Women of the World Executive Director Erin McCarthy (right) recently met with students in Encabo-Bischoff's English 131 class.

Traditionally a general education class serving as an introduction to academic writing, Encabo-Bischoff is trying something new this semester by asking the students to collaborate with the local non-profit organization Creative Women of the World.

"The idea for the Dean's Choice Awards arose after the planning committee identified an opportunity to better incorporate arts and humanities into the student experience," said planning committee member Alexis Murrell, assistant librarian. "Many of our deans have avidly supported our efforts to increase arts and humanities engagement on campus."

"I think it's the idea of being able to say what I want without using my voice," Spotts explained. "I enjoy a lot of different art forms, but overall I have a creative writing and enjoy drawing, meaning I'm always battling between my heart and head to create."

The Purdue University Fort Wayne senior's artistic gifts allow her to express herself in persuasive and sometimes moving ways. One example was her creative writing piece that she wrote for an event over the years, and with the introduction of the Dean's Choice Award, they now have the chance to not only recognize the quality of the work but to uplift the artists themselves.

An annual effort to select top high school seniors who will receive full, four-year scholarships to Purdue University Fort Wayne through the Summit Scholars Competition, and the class of 2023–24 is made up of six students identified as Chapman Scholars and another as a Doermer Exceptional Scholar.

ARTS AND HUMANITIES

New Category and Double Winner Highlight Research Symposium

and Endeavor Symposium on Friday.

Students, judges, and research posters lined the entire length of the Skybridge—twice—during the annual PFW Student Research Symposium held Friday on the Skybridge. Sixty-five students participating individually or as part of a group presented their work.

Symposia, " said planning committee member Alexis Murrell, assistant librarian. "Many of our deans have avidly supported our efforts to increase arts and humanities engagement on campus."

Students, judges, and research posters lined the entire length of the Skybridge—twice—during the annual PFW Student Research Symposium held Friday on the Skybridge. Sixty-five students participating individually or as part of a group presented their work.

"The idea for the Dean's Choice Awards arose after the planning committee identified an opportunity to better incorporate arts and humanities into the student experience," said planning committee member Alexis Murrell, assistant librarian. "Many of our deans have avidly supported our efforts to increase arts and humanities engagement on campus."

"I think it's the idea of being able to say what I want without using my voice," Spotts explained. "I enjoy a lot of different art forms, but overall I have a creative writing and enjoy drawing, meaning I'm always battling between my heart and head to create."

The Purdue University Fort Wayne senior's artistic gifts allow her to express herself in persuasive and sometimes moving ways. One example was her creative writing piece that she wrote for an event over the years, and with the introduction of the Dean's Choice Award, they now have the chance to not only recognize the quality of the work but to uplift the artists themselves.

An annual effort to select top high school seniors who will receive full, four-year scholarships to Purdue University Fort Wayne through the Summit Scholars Competition, and the class of 2023–24 is made up of six students identified as Chapman Scholars and another as a Doermer Exceptional Scholar.
Student Conduct and Care, Student Leadership, the Disability Access Center, and Human Resources and Office of Institutional Equity.

Athletics

Don Dates

News Center

Don Life is an official university communication sent weekly on Wednesday to all currently enrolled students. Don Life Special Edition is a supplement to the regularly scheduled newsletter. It covers breaking news and time-sensitive information directly related to university operations.