Senior Plans Out Future of Service That Includes Stint as Leader of the Free World

When he was 6 or 7 years old, current Purdue University Fort Wayne senior Evan Gregory promised his grandfather he would make a difference someday. A Vietnam War veteran, the grandfather was and is Gregory's hero, and the boy decided he could best fulfill his goal by becoming president.

And that is still Gregory's goal. He's taking steps to learn as much as he can now to become a better elected representative in the future. Already majoring in criminal justice and sociology, he recently added another in history, which will push his graduation back a semester.

"I have to know everything, plain and simple," Gregory said. "If I don't know everything, I will not be making the best decisions, I will not be fair to myself or other people."
Feb. 29 Omnibus Event Will Count Toward Civics Literacy Requirement

Students will have a chance to add to their Civics Literacy Proficiency Requirement at the end of the month by attending an Omnibus series event featuring guest speaker Donna Brazile.

What is the Civics Literacy Proficiency Requirement? That takes some explanation.

Believing the general population's understanding and participation in civic responsibilities had been declining for decades, the Purdue University Board of Trustees voted in June 2021 to implement a civics literacy graduation requirement. Purdue University Fort Wayne rolled out its version of the obligation during the fall 2022 semester.
$17K in Bonus Funds up For Grabs on Day of Giving April 24

The entire Mastodon community is invited to participate in Purdue Fort Wayne's annual day of giving—The Big Give—on April 24. The goal is to unite the campus and demonstrate its collective power of generosity.

Colleges, units, and student organizations can earn bonus funds by participating in a variety of hourly, all-day, and social media challenges. This year there is $17,000 available to be awarded. Check out last year's leaderboard and challenges for a reminder of who came out on top.

Contact Michelle Shaw, director of annual giving and stewardship, at shawm@pfw.edu to express interest in the 2024 campaign and learn how to make The Big Give successful.
